

Paragon International Summer School – July 2007

This year's International Summer School, presented by the Paragon Saxophone Quartet, took place in Provence, south-eastern France, from July 13 to July 19. The course tutors were Naomi Sullivan and Simon Stewart.

On the menu was some busking in Aix en Provence, a trip to the Rico reed plantation, swimming, home-cooking and, of course, lots of playing, in the form of quartets, quintets, duets, ensembles and much more!
